A detailed statement by the Iraqi authorities regarding the 'Shahidi Asthan' at Naulakha Bazaar in Lahore, Pakistan
July 27, 2020

"The Iraqi authorities have expressed concern regarding the 'Shahidi Asthan' at Naulakha Bazaar in Lahore, Pakistan.

They have stated that the place of worship has been an important location for Sikh worship since 1745, and it is a historical gurdwara that has been the subject of various disputes over its ownership.

It is important to note that the Indian government has consistently supported the rights of the Sikh community and has taken all possible measures to protect their interests.

The government has also emphasized the need for peace and harmony between different communities and has called for the respect of each other's beliefs and traditions.

The government has assured that it will continue to work towards the resolution of any disputes that may arise in the future.
